RE: Monica Hutohilson

To Whom It May Concern:

Monica has been in counseling at this office since 8/18/09. She came to counseling due to stress and emotional issues caused by episodes of harassment which was further complicated by a harassment lawsuit. Her presenting symptoms were withdrawal and fears in social situations, fears of being alone, worry that Mr. Anderson would come after her, decreased self confidence, as well as trust and difficulties in her relationship due to reactions to the alleged incidents. Monica has reported that all of these symptoms presented after the alleged harassment occurred. She reports difficulty throughout her employment history with Mr. Anderson. Prior to this she indicates that she was confident and outgoing.

Through therapeutic assessment, Monica has been diagnosed with Posttraumatic Stress Disorder. She experienced an event that involved threat of serious injury or physical integrity of herself and her friend. Her response did involve intense fear and helplessness. This was intensified by the power displayed by Mr. Anderson when he was able to get a court order to search her home to obtain evidence of the event. This further violated her privacy and any feelings of safety that may have remained after the night that Mr. Anderson allegedly called and came to her home. Feelings of fear and threat were further intensified with the act of calling the police but having no record filed of the event. In our society, law enforcement, judges, and prosecutors play a role of protectors. Because of the incidents that occurred Monica is left feeling like she cannot be safe. This feeling is reinforced by the following accusations of running a sex ring and falsifying office records.

Monica is also experiencing recurrent and intrusive distressing recollections of the event. She has reported having difficulty focusing at work, hyper vigilance, irritability, difficulty falling and staying asleep, repeated nightmares, fears of noises and being alone in her home. Monica had an incident in which she experienced intense anxiety and panic when a friend came to her home and knocked on the door late at night. At that time she had been progressing in her treatment but the trigger or external cue of someone coming to her home at night caused her to experience intense psychological and physiological distress.

Monica has also reported avoidance of stimuli associated with the trauma. She avoids activities, places, and people that remind her of the incidents. She avoids Texas County and feels anxious when going to her mother's house in the county. She also avoids public social situations in which she fears that she may be judged according to Mr. Anderson's accusations. She has reported that she has a lack of interest in activities that she previously enjoyed such as going out socially with her friends.

Monica has also estranged herself from co-workers because of her fear of additional inappropriate advances or relationships. She reports that she experiences anxiety when meeting with her employer following the incident. She is unable to meet in an office without the door opened and reports planning an "escape route" if she feels threatened. Her fears have caused her to feel detached from family, friends, and coworkers.

These symptoms have lasted more than one month and cause clinically significant distress and impairment in her social and occupational functioning as well as her ability to have trusting relationships with her coworkers and her spouse. These symptoms were not present prior to the harassment incidents. Monica has also reported feeling self-conscious and avoids use of make-up or nice clothes for fear of drawing attention to herself. Her responses are not unlike those of a victim of rape due to the threats and power of the alleged perpetrator. Monica meets the criteria in the DSM-IV for the diagnosis of Posttraumatic Stress Disorder (309.81) with chronic specifier due to her symptoms lasting more than three months.

Monica has made some progress in her therapy through trauma focused intervention. She has learned stress management techniques but as stated previously, when a trigger presents then her situation quickly deteriorates and leaves her feeling immobilized. Prognosis is fair depending upon legal outcomes and continued therapy.

This listing is created by the best of my ability from my calendar, mileage, and subpoenas. It is not all inclusive as there are additional court dates but case names were not available. Most cases were as an expert witness and were criminal child abuse cases. Due to confidentiality no case names were given for juvenile cases.
